

PRESS RELEASE

UK pop artist Andrew Nolan returns with his new single “Guilty”, released on 9 January 2026 via DWP Records.

The track is a cover of The Pearls’ UK Top 10 hit, bringing a timeless pop classic into Andrew’s established catalogue of melodic, emotionally driven releases.

Originally released in the 1970s, Guilty became a standout hit for The Pearls, earning widespread radio play and securing its place as a memorable moment in UK pop history. The song’s strong melody and direct emotional pull have helped it endure, making it a natural choice for reinterpretation by Andrew Nolan.

Production on Guilty is handled by David Wilks, whose polished, contemporary pop approach complements the song’s structure while respecting its original character.

The release is supported by remixes from Sakgra (Sakis Gravanis), a producer and mixer known for his retro-leaning pop sound with clear influences from late-1980s and early-1990s chart music. Sakgra has been a regular collaborator with Andrew Nolan, previously remixing several of his releases and developing a strong creative understanding of his vocal style and musical direction.

Andrew Nolan has steadily built a reputation for consistent, well-crafted pop releases that draw on classic songwriting traditions while remaining accessible to modern audiences. His work has gained long-term chart presence and airplay support, reflecting a growing and loyal listener base.

Guilty is available now across all major digital platforms.
