With over 30 years in the music industry, Andrew isn't just another pop hopeful — he's a seasoned artist with serious credentials, unstoppable charisma, and a sound that resonates across generations. Now, he's kicking off 2025 with his boldest release yet: a sparkling, feel-good cover of The Nolans' iconic hit Gotta Pull Myself Together, dropping April 18th on all major streaming and download platforms.

For fans of high-energy pop and unapologetic camp, this one's a must-listen.

Pop with a Purpose — and a Whole Lot of Pride

Andrew first made waves in 2021 with his debut single When I'm With You, instantly catching the ears of fans who love throwback beats, emotional lyrics, and unshakable hooks. By 2023, he was collaborating with Jazzi P (of Kylie Minogue's Shocked fame) on the fierce and fabulous Heartache and Lonely, cementing his place as a rising voice in the UK pop scene.

Now, with his debut album on the horizon, Andrew is bringing full retro realness with Gotta Pull Myself Together — a bold reimagining of a pop classic that's equal parts nostalgic and next-gen. Produced by David Wilks of DWP Records(Australia), the track is pure joy, pulsing with 80s-inspired energy and a healthy dose of queer fabulousness.

A Voice for the LGBTQ+ Pop Scene

Andrew's music has long struck a chord with LGBTQ+ audiences. His uplifting anthems, glitter-tinged visuals, and proudly pop persona make him a natural fit for the community — and his latest release is no exception. His tracks celebrate self-expression, camp fun, and musical joy at a time when the world could use all three.

Behind the scenes, Andrew is also working with industry heavyweights like Gordon Pogoda (Steps, Sonia, Nicki French), David Wilks (DWP Records), and Dave Buswell at Crazy Dog Records — whose recent credits include tracks on the new album by 80s legends Tight Fit. With collaborators like these, expect his upcoming album to be wall-to-wall bangers.
